

PART ONE. NATIONAL REBIRTH AND THE VILNIUS PERIOD	8
The problem of nationality in Čiurlionis' work	8
Transformations in the ideology of national rebirth	20
The strengthening of Čiurlionis' self-identification	28
The first Lithuanian art exhibition and its echoes	42
The Vilnius period of life and creativity	52
The triumph of the second Lithuanian art exhibition	61
Manifestations of nationality in Čiurlionis' work	73
The unattainable Paris of dreams	81
 PART TWO. FROM VILNIUS TO ST. PETERSBURG	89
A new turn on the path of life	89
The third Lithuanian art exhibition	97
Čiurlionis and transformations in the renewal of Russian artistic life	103
Dobuzhinsky's impulses	114
The field of influence of Makovsky's Salon	123
In the milieu of the World of Art	136
 PART THREE. RELATIONS WITH THE RUSSIAN AVANT-GARDE	157
The Imperial period	157
Changes in the Soviet era	167
Čiurlionis and the spread of the St. Petersburg avant-garde	179
Relations with futurism	192
The growing role of the Moscow avant-garde	206
The contact between M. Larionov's luchism and Čiurlionis' painting	222
Čiurlionis' black square and K. Malevich's suprematism	234
 PART FOUR. ČIURLIONIS AND THE RUSSIAN AVANT-GARDE IN WESTERN HISTORIOGRAPHY	259
The distinctive features of Western research	259
The main obstacles to research	268
Gray's interpretation	279
V. Marcadé and J.-C. Marcadé's views	284
A critical look at Bowlt's research	294
Čiurlionis in the light of Nakov's study	316
 PART FIVE. ČIURLIONIS IN THE CONTEXT OF ABSTRACT ART	331
The distinctiveness of the phenomenon of abstract art	331
Čiurlionis' view of the modernization of Western art	343
The spread of trends in the dematerialization of reality	350
Kandinsky's path to abstract painting	360
H. af Klint's stylistic transformations	371
Mondrian's neoplasticism	378
On the question of priority in the genesis of abstractionism	384
 PART SIX. MANIFESTATIONS OF SURREALISM AND METAPHYSICAL PAINTING	406
A look at the origins of Čiurlionis' surrealism and metaphysical painting	406
Redon and Čiurlionis: stylistic similarities and differences	421
Contacts with Chagall's poetic visions	430
A turn toward metaphysical painting	442
Interactions with de Chirico's metaphysical painting	450
The distinctiveness of Čiurlionis' period of metaphysical painting	465
Relations with poetic and naturalistic surrealism	476
Stylistic connections between Čiurlionis' artistic images and the surrealists	494

PART SEVEN. REFLECTIONS OF CREATIVE PROCESSES IN THE MIRROR OF PSYCHOLOGY	512
Methodological notes	512
Čiurlionis as an object of the psychology of creative processes	521
Creative potential and its main components	534
Philosophical thinking and perception of the world	537
The power of imagination and fantasy	544
Intuitive cognition and improvisation	552
Observation, attention, and memory	562
Industriousness and the fluctuation of creative processes	569
Empathy, intention, and inspiration	576
The role of sketches, drawings, and drafts	584
The withdrawal of personality and striving for perfection	590
PART EIGHT. COMPOSITION AND PERSPECTIVE	600
The functions of composition in Čiurlionis' painting	600
Transformations of compositional quests	611
Connections with East Asian systems of composition and perspective	620
Models of closed and open composition	634
Distinctive systems of perspective	645
The principle of non finito	653
PART NINE. COLOR AND COLOR SCHEME	661
The place of color and color scheme in Čiurlionis' painting	661
A glance at the history of knowledge of the phenomenon of color	671
The impact of the theosophical theory of color	681
Transformations in the concept of color and color scheme	686
The early stage and the metaphysics of the predominant greenish color	699
Changes in color and color scheme during the sonata period	708
PART TEN. MUSICALITY AND RHYTHM	723
Musicality in pictorial expression	723
The influence of theosophy and East Asian pictorial aesthetics	735
The role of rhythmic structures in musical painting	741
The magic of the meandering line	745
Rhythm in the early stage of evolution	748
Rhythm in mature sonata painting	753
PART ELEVEN. GENIUS BETWEEN ILLUMINATIONS AND ABYSMAL DARKNESS	767
Genius versus nervous exhaustion	767
Čiurlionis and van Gogh: two creative trajectories of l'artiste maudit	783
Sadness and melancholy as a way of perceiving the world	799
Depressive visions of twilight	806
The last stage of creative upsurge in Lithuania	816
Signs of a deepening crisis	822
Tragedies and premonitions of death	828
Conclusion	847
Bibliography	867
Summary in English	893
Index of names	928
Contents in French	938
Contents in English	940
Contents in Russian	942